

Interplay

FOURTEENTH EDITION

The Process of Interpersonal Communication

RONALD B. ADLER
LAWRENCE B. ROSENFELD
RUSSELL F. PROCTOR II

OXFORD
UNIVERSITY PRESS

Interplay

Interplay

The Process of Interpersonal Communication

FOURTEENTH EDITION

Ronald B. Adler
Santa Barbara City College

Lawrence B. Rosenfeld
The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill

Russell F. Proctor II
Northern Kentucky University

New York • Oxford
OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS

Oxford University Press is a department of the University of Oxford. It furthers the University's objective of excellence in research, scholarship, and education by publishing worldwide. Oxford is a registered trademark of Oxford University Press in the UK and certain other countries.

Published in the United States of America by Oxford University Press
198 Madison Avenue, New York, NY 10016, United States of America.

© 2018, 2015, 2013, 2010, 2007, 2004, 2001 by Oxford University Press

For titles covered by Section 112 of the US Higher Education Opportunity Act, please visit www.oup.com/us/he for the latest information about pricing and alternate formats.

All rights reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system, or transmitted, in any form or by any means, without the prior permission in writing of Oxford University Press, or as expressly permitted by law, by license, or under terms agreed with the appropriate reproduction rights organization. Inquiries concerning reproduction outside the scope of the above should be sent to the Rights Department, Oxford University Press, at the address above.

You must not circulate this work in any other form and you must impose this same condition on any acquirer.

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication Data

Names: Adler, Ronald B. (Ronald Brian), 1946– author. |

Rosenfeld, Lawrence B., author. | Proctor, Russell F., author.

Title: Interplay: the process of interpersonal communication / Ronald B.

Adler, Santa Barbara City College, Lawrence B. Rosenfeld, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Russell F. Proctor II, Northern Kentucky University.

Description: Fourteenth edition. | New York, NY: Oxford University Press, [2018]

Identifiers: LCCN 2017031955 | ISBN 9780190646257 (pbk.) | ISBN 9780190646264 (pbk.)

Subjects: LCSH: Interpersonal communication.

Classification: LCC BF637.C45 A33 2018 | DDC 302.2—dc23

LC record available at <https://lcn.loc.gov/2017031955>

9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2 1

Printed by LSC Communications, United States of America

Brief Contents

Preface xv

PART 1

FOUNDATIONS OF INTERPERSONAL COMMUNICATION

- 1 Interpersonal Process 3
- 2 Culture and Interpersonal Communication 37
- 3 Interpersonal Communication and the Self 69
- 4 Perceiving Others 103

PART 2

CREATING AND RESPONDING TO MESSAGES

- 5 Language 135
- 6 Nonverbal Communication 165
- 7 Listening: Receiving and Responding 195
- 8 Emotions 227

PART 3

DIMENSIONS OF INTERPERSONAL RELATIONSHIPS

- 9 Dynamics of Interpersonal Relationships 259
- 10 Communication in Close Relationships: Friends, Family, and Romantic Partners 291
- 11 Managing Conflict 323
- 12 Communication Climate 353

Glossary G-1

References R-1

Credits C-1

Author Index AI-1

Subject Index SI-1

Contents

Preface xv

PART 1

FOUNDATIONS OF INTERPERSONAL COMMUNICATION

1 Interpersonal Process 3

FEATURES

MEDIA CLIP: Solitude and Connection: Wild 6

DARK SIDE OF COMMUNICATION: Loneliness and the Internet: A Delicate Balance 7

AT WORK: Communication and Career Advancement 9

FOCUS ON RESEARCH: Tweeting: The Channel Affects the Message 12

MEDIA CLIP: Pathologically Competent: House of Cards 22

ASSESSING YOUR COMMUNICATION: Your Use of Social Media 24

FOCUS ON RESEARCH: Sidestepping Permanence: The Attraction of Snapchat 27

WATCH AND DISCUSS: “Men Read Mean Tweets to Female Sports Reporters” 31

Why We Communicate 4

Physical Needs 5

Identity Needs 6

Social Needs 7

Practical Needs 8

The Communication Process 9

Early Models of Communication 9

Insights from the Transactional Communication Model 10

Communication Principles 13

The Nature of Interpersonal Communication 15

Communication Misconceptions 17

Communication Competence 19

Principles of Communication Competence 19

Characteristics of Competent Communication 21

Social Media and Interpersonal Communication 23

Characteristics of Social Media 23

Social Media and Relational Quality 28

Communicating Competently with Social Media 29

CHECK YOUR UNDERSTANDING 33

KEY TERMS 34

ACTIVITIES 34

2 Culture and Interpersonal Communication 37

Culture and Communication 38

Culture and Co-Culture 38

Intercultural Communication 40

FEATURES

MEDIA CLIP: Embracing Tradition and Change: Meet the Patels 39

MEDIA CLIP: Straddling Cultures: black-ish 49

DARK SIDE OF COMMUNICATION: When “Harmless” Labels Do Harm 50

AT WORK: Organizations Are Cultures 55

FOCUS ON RESEARCH: Saying “I’m Sorry” in Japanese and English: Different Codes 58

ASSESSING YOUR COMMUNICATION: What Is Your Intercultural Communication Competence? 60

WATCH AND DISCUSS: “Momondo: The DNA Journey” 62

FOCUS ON RESEARCH: Living in Another Culture: Adapting and Adopting 63

Interpersonal and Intercultural Dimensions of Communication 42
Intercultural Differences as Generalizations 43

Cultural Values and Norms 43

High Versus Low Context 43
Individualism Versus Collectivism 44
Power Distance 46
Uncertainty Avoidance 47
Achievement Versus Nurturing 48

Co-Cultures and Communication 48

Race and Ethnicity 48
Gender Identity/Sexual Orientation 50
Age/Generation 51
(Dis)abilities 52
Socioeconomic Status 53

Codes and Culture 54

Verbal Codes 54
Nonverbal Codes 58

Developing Intercultural Communication Competence 59

Motivation and Attitude 60
Tolerance for Ambiguity 61
Open-Mindedness 61
Knowledge and Skill 62
Patience and Perseverance 63

CHECK YOUR UNDERSTANDING 64KEY TERMS 65*ACTIVITIES 66*3 Interpersonal Communication and the Self 69*Communication and the Self-Concept 70

How the Self-Concept Develops 71
Characteristics of the Self-Concept 73
The Self-Fulfilling Prophecy and Communication 76

FEATURES

FOCUS ON RESEARCH: Does Instagram = #Instasad? 73

WATCH AND DISCUSS: “Dove Evolution Commercial” 74

MEDIA CLIP: Reflecting Years of Appraisal: This Is Us 75

AT WORK: Impression Management in the Workplace 81

MEDIA CLIP: The Promise and Perils of Online Relationships: Catfish: The TV Show 82

DARK SIDE OF COMMUNICATION: Talking Frankly About STDs 90

ASSESSING YOUR COMMUNICATION: Online and Offline Self-Disclosure 93

Presenting the Self 77

Public and Private Selves 78

Characteristics of Impression Management 79

Face-to-Face Impression Management 80

Impression Management in Social Media 80

Impression Management and Honesty 83

Disclosing the Self 84

Self-Disclosure Factors 85

Models of Self-Disclosure 86

Benefits and Risks of Self-Disclosure 88

Guidelines for Self-Disclosure 91

Alternatives to Self-Disclosure 93

CHECK YOUR UNDERSTANDING 98KEY TERMS 99*ACTIVITIES 100*4 Perceiving Others 103*FEATURES

FOCUS ON RESEARCH: Online Channels Affect Perception 108

WATCH AND DISCUSS: “All That We Share” 110

AT WORK: Sexual Harassment and Perception 115

MEDIA CLIP: Master of Perception: Sherlock 118

FOCUS ON RESEARCH: Hurtful Communication: A Matter of Perception 122

DARK SIDE OF COMMUNICATION: Distorting Perception: The Gaslight Effect 126

MEDIA CLIP: Gaining Empathy: Undercover Boss 128

ASSESSING YOUR COMMUNICATION: Your Empathy Quotient 129

The Perception Process 104

Reality Is Constructed 104

Steps in the Perception Process 106

Influences on Perception 110

Access to Information 110

Physiological Influences 110

Psychological Influences 112

Social Influences 113

Cultural Influences 117

Common Tendencies in Perception 118

We Make Snap Judgments 119

We Cling to First Impressions 120

We Judge Ourselves More Charitably Than We Do Others 121

We Are Influenced by Our Expectations 122

We Are Influenced by the Obvious 123

We Assume Others Are Like Us 123

Synchronizing Our Perceptions 124

Perception Checking 124

Building Empathy 126

CHECK YOUR UNDERSTANDING 130KEY TERMS 131*ACTIVITIES 131

FOCUS ON RESEARCH: Nonverbal Imitation: The Sincerest Form of Flattery 180

AT WORK: Let Your Voice Be Heard 183

DARK SIDE OF COMMUNICATION: The Inequality of “Lookism” 188

Concealing/Deceiving 175

Managing Impressions 177

Types of Nonverbal Communication 178

Body Movement 178

Touch 181

Voice 182

Distance 184

Territoriality 187

Time 187

Physical Attractiveness 188

Clothing 189

Physical Environment 189

CHECK YOUR UNDERSTANDING 190

KEY TERMS 191

ACTIVITIES 192

7 Listening: Receiving and Responding 195

FEATURES

AT WORK: Listening on the Job 197

ASSESSING YOUR COMMUNICATION: Your Listening Styles 200

MEDIA CLIP: Multifaceted Listening: The Profit 201

DARK SIDE OF COMMUNICATION: The Myth of Multitasking 205

FOCUS ON RESEARCH: Responding Helps Speakers Tell Their Stories 207

WATCH AND DISCUSS: “Brené Brown on Empathy” 215

MEDIA CLIP: Responding Directively: Scandal 219

FOCUS ON RESEARCH: Exchanging Advice Online 220

The Nature of Listening 196

The Importance of Listening 196

Listening Defined 197

Listening Styles 199

The Challenge of Listening 202

Recognizing Barriers to Listening 202

Avoiding Poor Listening Habits 203

Components of Listening 204

Hearing 204

Attending 204

Understanding 205

Remembering 206

Responding 206

Types of Listening Responses 207

Silent Listening 208

Questioning 209

Paraphrasing 211

Empathizing 214

Supporting 216

Analyzing 218

Evaluating 218
 Advising 219
 Which Response Type to Use? 221

CHECK YOUR UNDERSTANDING 222

KEY TERMS 223

ACTIVITIES 224

8 Emotions 227

FEATURES

MEDIA CLIP: Intelligence of Another Variety: The Big Bang Theory 228

WATCH AND DISCUSS: “The Marriage Hack” 231

FOCUS ON RESEARCH: Managing Grief with Humor 233

AT WORK: Emotional Labor on the Job 236

DARK SIDE OF COMMUNICATION: Fictional Characters, Real Feelings: Parasocial Relationships 237

ASSESSING YOUR COMMUNICATION: Your Emotional Intelligence 243

FOCUS ON RESEARCH: When Talking About Feelings Makes Things Worse 252

MEDIA CLIP: Self-Talk and Resilience: Unbreakable Kimmy Schmidt 254

What Are Emotions? 229

Physiological Changes 229
 Nonverbal Behavior 230
 Cognitive Interpretations 230
 Verbal Expression 231

Influences on Emotional Expression 232

Personality 232
 Culture 233
 Gender 234
 Social Conventions and Roles 235
 Social Media 235
 Emotional Contagion 237

Expressing Emotions Effectively 238

Recognize Your Feelings 238
 Choose the Best Language 239
 Share Multiple Feelings 241
 Recognize the Difference Between Feeling and Acting 242
 Accept Responsibility for Your Feelings 242
 Choose the Best Time and Place to Express Your Feelings 242

Managing Emotions 244

Facilitative and Debilitative Emotions 244
 Thoughts Cause Feelings 245
 Irrational Thinking and Debilitative Emotions 247
 Minimizing Debilitative Emotions 251
 Maximizing Facilitative Emotions 254

CHECK YOUR UNDERSTANDING 255

KEY TERMS 256

ACTIVITIES 256

PART 3

DIMENSIONS OF INTERPERSONAL
RELATIONSHIPS

9 Dynamics of Interpersonal Relationships 259

FEATURES

DARK SIDE OF COMMUNICATION: The Anguish of Abusive Relationships 263

MEDIA CLIP: The Power and Peril of Disclosure: Homeland 265

FOCUS ON RESEARCH: Communicating About Relational Baggage 268

FOCUS ON RESEARCH: The Dialectical Tensions of Cell Phone Use 275

MEDIA CLIP: Finding Connection: Trainwreck 276

WATCH AND DISCUSS: “Couples Swap Phones and Go Through Each Other’s History” 277

ASSESSING YOUR COMMUNICATION: Relational Maintenance 282

AT WORK: Relational Repair on the Job 284

Why We Form Relationships 260

Appearance 260

Similarity 261

Complementarity 262

Rewards 262

Competency 264

Proximity 265

Disclosure 265

Models of Relational Dynamics 266

Stages of Relational Development 266

Dialectical Tensions 273

Communicating About Relationships 278

Content and Relational Messages 278

Maintaining and Supporting Relationships 280

Repairing Damaged Relationships 284

CHECK YOUR UNDERSTANDING 287KEY TERMS 288*ACTIVITIES 288

10 Communication in Close Relationships: Friends, Family, and Romantic Partners 291

FEATURES

FOCUS ON RESEARCH: Close Friendships: State of the Union 295

WATCH AND DISCUSS: “Can Men and Women Be Just Friends?” 296

AT WORK: Social Media Relationships with Coworkers 300

Communication in Friendships 292

Types of Friendships 292

Friendships, Gender, and Communication 294

Friendship and Social Media 297

Communication in Successful Friendships 298

Communication in the Family 301

Creating the Family Through Communication 302

Patterns of Family Communication 304

Effective Communication in Families 307

MEDIA CLIP: Voluntary Families:
Finding Dory 302

ASSESSING YOUR COMMUNICATION:
Your Family's Communication
Pattern 307

FOCUS ON RESEARCH: Parental
Disclosures with Adult Children 309

MEDIA CLIP: Maybe "I Do," Maybe I
Don't: Married at First Sight 315

DARK SIDE OF COMMUNICATION:
Virtually Unfaithful: Emotional
Infidelity Online 318

Communication in Romantic Relationships 311

Characteristics of Romantic Relationships 312

Effective Communication in Romantic Relationships 316

CHECK YOUR UNDERSTANDING 319

KEY TERMS 320

ACTIVITIES 320

11 Managing Conflict 323

FEATURES

FOCUS ON RESEARCH: The Dangers of
Mind-Reading Expectations 326

MEDIA CLIP: Fighting over Scarce
Resources: Empire 327

DARK SIDE OF COMMUNICATION:
Ghosting: The Ultimate Silent
Treatment 329

WATCH AND DISCUSS: "Signs You're the Passive Aggressive Friend" 331

ASSESSING YOUR COMMUNICATION:
Your Method of Conflict Resolution 335

FOCUS ON RESEARCH: "We Have to Talk": Men and Women in Conflict 342

MEDIA CLIP: Hostile Takeover:
The Founder 345

AT WORK: Third-Party Dispute
Resolution 346

What Is Conflict? 324

Expressed Struggle 325

Interdependence 325

Perceived Incompatible Goals 325

Perceived Scarce Resources 326

Inevitability 326

Conflict Styles 327

Avoidance (Lose-Lose) 328

Accommodation (Lose-Win) 329

Competition (Win-Lose) 330

Compromise 331

Collaboration (Win-Win) 332

Which Style to Use? 334

Conflict in Relational Systems 336

Complementary and Symmetrical Conflict 336

Serial Arguments 338

Toxic Conflict: The "Four Horsemen" 339

Conflict Rituals 340

Variables in Conflict Styles 341

Gender 341

Culture 343

Conflict Management in Practice 344

CHECK YOUR UNDERSTANDING 349

KEY TERMS 350

ACTIVITIES 350

12 Communication Climate 353

FEATURES*DARK SIDE OF COMMUNICATION:

Cyberbullying: Inflicting Pain
Online 355

ASSESSING YOUR COMMUNICATION:

Confirming and Disconfirming
Communication 358

FOCUS ON RESEARCH: Phubbing: Losing
Out to Your Partner's Phone 359

MEDIA CLIP: Victimized by Aggressiveness: Moonlight 360

FOCUS ON RESEARCH: A Blurt Can
Hurt 366

MEDIA CLIP: Changing the Climate, Ever
So Slowly: Doc Martin 369

WATCH AND DISCUSS: "Emotional
Correctness" 370

AT WORK: Taking the High Road:
Keeping Cool Under Fire 373

What Is a Communication Climate? 354

How Communication Climates Develop 355

Levels of Message Confirmation 356

Causes and Effects of Defensiveness 361

Creating Supportive Climates 362

Evaluation Versus Description 363

Control Versus Problem Orientation 364

Strategy Versus Spontaneity 365

Neutrality Versus Empathy 366

Superiority Versus Equality 367

Certainty Versus Provisionalism 368

Invitational Communication 370

The Language of Choice 371

Responding Nondefensively to Criticism 372

CHECK YOUR UNDERSTANDING 377

KEY TERMS 378

ACTIVITIES 378

Glossary G-1

References R-1

Credits C-1

Author Index AI-1

Subject Index SI-1

Preface

A wise editor once told us that any revision to a successful textbook should be both familiar and fresh. It should include plenty of updated material, but it should retain the essence of its time-tested approach. We have worked hard to make sure this edition of Interplay achieves those goals.

This new edition builds on the approach that has served students and professors over almost four decades. The accessible writing style is based on the belief that even complicated ideas can be presented in a straightforward way. A variety of thought-provoking photos, sidebars, and cartoons make the subject more interesting and compelling. In terms of its scholarly grounding, Interplay cites more than 1,500 sources, nearly a third of which are new to this edition. These citations have a strong communication focus, as we continue to spotlight scholarship from our field. Research and theory aren't presented for their own sake, but rather to explain how the process of interpersonal communication operates in everyday life.

NEW IN THIS EDITION

One effective way of incorporating new concepts and research is to offer plenty of cutting-edge material in sidebars. Reviewers tell us these sidebars are essential to Interplay's success, so we've updated them across the board.

- Focus on Research boxes—18 of which are new to this edition—cover timely subjects including the pros and cons of communicating via Snapchat, cultural differences in how speakers apologize, the relationship between Instagram and social comparison, the role of punctuation in text messages, relational struggles caused by cell phone use, disclosures between parents and their adult children, and the negative effects of mind-reading expectations.
- Dark Side of Communication sidebars address problems including how seemingly harmless labels can cause interpersonal damage, talking frankly about STDs, saying “sorry” too often, the dangers of multitasking, and the harmful effects of “ghosting.”
- Media Clips use both television shows and films to dramatize how communication concepts operate in everyday life. New TV shows include black-ish (co-cultural communication), This Is Us (self-concept), Game of Thrones (language), The Americans (deception), Speechless (nonverbal communication), Unbreakable Kimmy Schmidt (emotion management), and Empire (conflict). New feature films include Wild (social needs), Meet the Patels (culture), Trainwreck (relational dialectics), Finding Dory (family), and Moonlight (aggressiveness).
- At Work boxes help readers apply scholarship to their careers. New topics include letting your voice be heard (literally) on the job, relational repair at work, online relationships with coworkers, and keeping cool under fire.

- Watch and Discuss is a new feature in this edition. These thumbnail images point to YouTube videos for viewing in or out of the classroom and are followed by two discussion prompts each. Topics include mean tweets and disinhibition, “vaguebooking” (posting ambiguous messages on Facebook), how your body language can affect the way you feel, listening with empathy, privacy management and cell phones, whether women and men can “just be friends,” passive aggressive communication, and “emotional correctness.”
- Assessing Your Communication instruments in every chapter help students understand and improve how they communicate in important relationships. New instruments in this edition focus on social media use and relational maintenance skills.

We have also made many changes to the text proper to address the latest communication research and changing communication practices. These include the following:

- Chapter 1 includes two new topics: masspersonal communication—messages that are personal yet public; and multimodality—the ability and willingness to use multiple channels of communication.
- Chapter 2 offers new discussions on code-switching, intersectionality, and communicating about disabilities.
- Chapter 4 has enhanced coverage of empathy and the role it plays in helping communicators understand and appreciate each other.
- Chapter 5 offers a new summary of gender and language usage.
- Chapter 6 adds a review of research on how our own nonverbal behavior influences the way we feel.
- Chapter 8 provides new coverage of self-talk as a means for managing emotions.
- Chapter 10 updates and extends the discussion of friendship and describes the relational value of singleness.
- Chapter 11 moves up the topic of conflict and describes how serial arguments work in interpersonal communication.
- Chapter 12 now concludes the book with coverage of communication climate, which includes new and updated material on confirming messages, aggressiveness, ostracism, and the language of choice.

DIGITAL AND PRINT ANCILLARY RESOURCES

In addition to the text, a variety of ancillaries provide resources for both instructors and students. Whether you have taught with Interplay for many years or are encountering it for the first time, you will note that we use film, television, and other references to popular culture throughout the book to engage students and help them apply concepts. While this has long been a hallmark of our approach and book, we’re pleased to now offer featured videos for students and instructors. Short clips from the Media Clip and Watch and Discuss features are now included on the student website, in the course cartridges for your learning management system, and in OUP's Dashboard system and its integrated ebook.

Online Learning

- Dashboard delivers an enhanced ebook and interactive activities and assessments to track student progress in a simple and intuitive online environment. All Dashboard content is engineered to work on mobile devices, including Android and iOS platforms. With this edition's Dashboard, professors and students have more interactive and engaging content than ever before. Each chapter includes:
 - Brief audio and video chapter summaries to help students review the basics
 - Flashcards to help students master new vocabulary
 - Interactive drag-and-drop chapter summaries to test whether students know the basics and have the vocabulary in hand
 - Multiple-choice pre- and posttests (20 multiple-choice questions each) to assess students' knowledge and ability to understand and apply information
 - Media Clip and Watch and Discuss video clips with assessments, based on the book's features, to help students apply what they have learned
 - Interactive versions of the book's popular self-assessments to give students immediate feedback on their communication skills and behaviors
- Course Cartridges for a variety of learning management systems—including BlackBoard, Canvas, D2L, Moodle, and more—gives you Oxford's quality content in your learning management system in just a few clicks. The course cartridge for Interplay includes the test bank and the following resources and activities in every chapter: flashcards, pre- and posttests (20 multiple-choice questions each), audio and video chapter summaries, and Media Clip and Watch and Discuss video clips with multiple-choice assessments. With no new systems to learn and no access code for students, course cartridges make online assignments easy and accessible to all.

For Instructors

- The Ancillary Resource Center (ARC) at www.oup-arc.com is a convenient, instructor-focused, single destination for resources to accompany Interplay. Accessed online through individual user accounts, the ARC provides instructors with up-to-date ancillaries at any time while guaranteeing the security of grade-significant resources. In addition, it allows OUP to keep instructors informed when new content becomes available. The ARC for Interplay contains a variety of materials to aid in teaching:
 - An enhanced Instructor's Manual and Computerized Test Bank provides teaching tips, exercises, and test questions that will prove useful to both new and veteran instructors. The Instructor's

Manual includes teaching strategies, course outlines, plentiful in-class activities with specific instructions and teaching tips, discussion prompts, and journal prompts. The comprehensive Test Bank offers approximately 100 class-tested exam questions per chapter in multiple-choice, true/false, essay, and matching formats.

- Newly revised PowerPoint-based lecture slides have been redesigned for optimal utility and accessibility.
- Now Playing: Instructor's Edition, an instructor-only online supplement, includes an introduction on how to incorporate film examples in class, sample responses to the numerous discussion questions in the student edition of Now Playing, viewing guides, additional films, and references.

Contact your Oxford University Press representative or call (800) 280-0280 for more information on accessing these resources.

For Students

- Now Playing: Learning Communication Through Film looks at contemporary and classic feature films through the lens of communication principles. Now Playing illustrates a variety of both individual scenes and full-length films, highlighting concepts and offering discussion questions for a mass medium that is interactive, familiar, and easily accessible. This resource gives you numerous film examples at your fingertips, saving you valuable preparation time. Contact your Oxford University Press representative or call (800) 280-0280 to package Now Playing with your textbook.
- The companion website at www.oup.com/us/interplay offers a wealth of free and open study resources for students: flashcards, video and audio chapter summaries, interactive self-tests, and Media Clip and Watch and Discuss video clips with multiple-choice assessments.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

The book you are reading wouldn't have been possible without the help of many talented people. We are grateful to the many colleagues whose suggestions have helped make this book a far better one:

Julie Allee
Ivy Tech Community College

Marie Arcidiacono
Los Medanos College–Brentwood Campus

Diane M. Badzinski
Colorado Christian University

Ellen Bland
Central Carolina Community College

Chantele S. Carr
Estrella Mountain College

Audrey Deterding
Northern Arizona University

Liz Edgecomb
Xavier University of Louisiana

Annette N. Hamel
Western Michigan University

Debra Harper-LeBlanc
Lone Star College–North Harris

Daniel Johnson
Southwestern Michigan College

Shyla Lefever
Old Dominion University

Julie Mayberry
North Carolina State University

Bonnie McCracken
SUNY Genesee

Lucas Messer
Scottsdale Community College

Craig Parmley
Ivy Tech Community College

Karri Pearson
Normandale Community College

Interplay continues to benefit from the contributions of these colleagues who helped shape previous editions:

Marcanne Andersen
Tidewater Community College

Angie M. S. Anderson
Anoka-Ramsey Community College

Aurora Auter
University of Southwestern Louisiana

Nancy Bandiera
Charleston Southern University

Sharon Beal
*Long Beach City College/
Chapman University*

Constance Berman
Berkshire Community College

Heather Bixler
College of the Sequoias

Sandra Bodin-Lerner
Kean University

Colleen Butcher
University of Florida

Leeva Chung
University of San Diego

Kathleen Czech
Point Loma Nazarene University

Andrea M. Davis
*University of South Carolina
Upstate*

Katrina Eicher
Elizabethtown Community College

Susan Fletcher
Hocking College

Karyn Friesen
Lone Star College—Montgomery

Kristin K. Froemling
Radford University

Narissra Punyanunt-Carter
Texas Tech University

Leighann Rehtin
Ivy Tech Community College

Darlene J. Geiger
Portland State University

Debra Gonsler
Bronx Community College

Em Griffin
Wheaton College

Lowell Habel
Chapman University

Gail Hankins
Wake Technical College

Meredith Harrigan
SUNY Geneseo

Kristin Haun
University of Tennessee

Lisa C. Hebert
Louisiana State University

Brittany W. Hochstaetter
Wake Technical Community College

Shaorong Huang
*Raymond Walters College—
University of Cincinnati*

Joy A. Jones
Atlantic Cape Community College

Beverly Merrill Kelley
California Lutheran University

Betty Kennan
Radford University

Anastasia Kurylo
Marymount Manhattan College

Andrea Lambert South
Northern Kentucky University

Phil Martin
North Central State College

Heidi Schara
Riverland Community College

Lindsay Timmerman
University of Wisconsin—Milwaukee

Tim Moreland
Catawba College

Mark Morman
Baylor University

Kelly Morrison
Michigan State University

Johance F. Murray
Hostos Community College/ CUNY

Noreen Mysyk
North Central College

Gretchen R. Norling
University of West Florida

Joey Pogue
Pittsburg State University

Tracey Powers
Central Arizona College

Laurie Pratt
Chaffey College

Narissra Maria Punyanunt-Carter
Texas Tech University

Rasha I. Ramzy
Georgia State University

Rachel Reznik
Elmhurst College

Elizabeth Ribarsky
University of Illinois—Springfield

Gregory W. Rickert
Lexington Community College

Jennifer A. Samp
University of Georgia

Julie Simanski
Des Moines Area Community College

Debbie Sonandre
Tacoma Community College

Renee Strom
Saint Cloud State University

Dennis Sutton
Grand Rapids Community College

Judith Vogel
Des Moines Area Community College

Emanuelle Wessels
Missouri State University

Michael Wittig
Waukesha County Technical College

Gordon Young
Kingsborough Community College

Our thanks to Rachel Reznik (Elmhurst College) and Jessica Kratzer (Northern Kentucky University), who served as Contributing Editors on this edition and made numerous helpful additions to the text. We salute the team of talented and congenial professionals at Oxford University Press, led and inspired by John Challice. We thank Toni Magyar, our hands-on Editor; Michele Laseau, Art Director; Barbara Mathieu, Senior Production Editor; Lisa Grzan, Production Manager; Theresa Stockton, Production Team Lead; Paul Longo, Assistant Editor; and Allegra Howard, Katlin Kocher, and Alyssa Quinones, Editorial Assistants. We're also grateful for the oversight of Editorial Director Patrick Lynch and Director of Development Thom Holmes. Our Developmental Editor, Lauren Mine, deserves special acknowledgment: A full account of her contributions would require a book of its own. Our thanks also go to James Fraleigh for his copyediting talents and to Colleen Dunham for crafting the useful indexes. Sandy Cooke of OUP Canada tracked down images from films and television. Sherri Adler chose the evocative photos that help make Interplay unique.

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

Ronald B. Adler is Professor Emeritus of Communication at Santa Barbara City College. He is coauthor of Understanding Human Communication (OUP, 2017); Essential Communication (OUP, 2018); Looking Out, Looking In (2016); and Communicating at Work: Principles and Practices for Business and the Professions (2013). Beyond his professional life, Ron tries to give back to his community. He also enjoys cycling, hiking, traveling, and spending time with his family.

Lawrence B. Rosenfeld is Professor Emeritus of Communication at The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. His articles appear in journals in communication, education, social work, sport psychology, and psychology, and he is the author of books on small-group, interpersonal, and nonverbal communication. Lawrence has received teaching and research awards from the National Communication Association and in 2012 received the William C. Friday Award for Excellence in Teaching. He is an artist and co-owner of Live Gently Art.

Russell F. Proctor II is Professor Emeritus of Communication at Northern Kentucky University. He won NKU's Outstanding Professor Award in 1997 and has also received recognition for his teaching from the National Communication Association, the Central States Communication Association, and the Kentucky Communication Association. Russ joined the Interplay team in the mid-1990s and was the lead author on this edition of the book. He loves sports, music, movies, and traveling with family and friends.

Interplay

Interpersonal Process

LEARNING OBJECTIVES

- 1.1 Recognize the needs that communication satisfies.
- 1.2 Explain the interpersonal communication process: its transactional nature, governing principles, and characteristics.
- 1.3 Identify characteristics of effective communication and competent communicators.
- 1.4 Describe the advantages and drawbacks of various social media communication channels in relation to face-to-face communication.

FEATURES

- Media Clip: Solitude and Connection: Wild 6
- Dark Side of Communication: Loneliness and the Internet: A Delicate Balance 7
- At Work: Communication and Career Advancement 9
- Focus on Research: Tweeting: The Channel Affects the Message 12
- Media Clip: Pathologically Competent: House of Cards 22
- Assessing Your Communication: Your Use of Social Media 24
- Focus on Research: Sidestepping Permanence: The Attraction of Snapchat 27
- Watch and Discuss: “Men Read Mean Tweets to Female Sports Reporters” 31

CHAPTER OUTLINE

Why We Communicate 4

- Physical Needs 5
- Identity Needs 6
- Social Needs 7
- Practical Needs 8

The Communication Process 9

- Early Models of Communication 9
- Insights from the Transactional Communication Model 10
- Communication Principles 13
- The Nature of Interpersonal Communication 15
- Communication Misconceptions 17

Communication Competence 19

- Principles of Communication Competence 19
- Characteristics of Competent Communication 21

Social Media and Interpersonal Communication 23

- Characteristics of Social Media 23
- Social Media and Relational Quality 28
- Communicating Competently with Social Media 29

CHECK YOUR UNDERSTANDING 33

KEY TERMS 34

ACTIVITIES 34

EVERYONE COMMUNICATES. Students and professors, parents and children, employers and employees, friends, strangers, and enemies—all communicate. We have been communicating with others from earliest childhood and will almost certainly keep doing so until we die.

Why study an activity you've done your entire life? First, studying interpersonal communication will give you a new look at a familiar topic. For instance, you may not have realized that you can't not communicate or that more communication doesn't always improve relationships—topics that you'll read about in a few pages. In this sense, exploring human communication is like studying anatomy or botany—everyday objects and processes take on new meaning.

A second, more compelling reason is that we all could stand to be more effective communicators. A nationwide survey identified “lack of effective communication” as the leading cause of relational breakups, ahead of money, relatives or in-laws, sexual problems, previous relationships, or children (National Communication Association, 1999). Ineffective communication is also a major problem in the workplace, as 62 percent of surveyed executives indicated in another study (American Management Association, 2012). Perhaps that's why parents identify communication as the most important skill set their children need to succeed in life (Goo, 2015).

Pause now to make a mental list of communication problems you have encountered. You'll probably see that no matter how successful your relationships are at home, with friends, at school, and at work, there is plenty of room for improvement in your everyday life. The information that follows will help you communicate better with some of the people who matter most to you.

WHY WE COMMUNICATE

Research demonstrating the importance of communication has been around longer than you might think. Frederick II, emperor of the Holy Roman Empire from 1220 to 1250, carried out language deprivation experiments. A medieval historian described a dramatically inhumane one:

He bade foster mothers and nurses to suckle the children, to bathe and wash them, but in no way to prattle with them, for he wanted to learn whether they would speak the Hebrew language, which was the oldest, or Greek, or Latin, or Arabic, or perhaps the language of their parents, of whom they had been born. But he labored in vain because all the children died. For they could not live without the petting and joyful faces and loving words of their foster mothers. (Ross & McLaughlin, 1949, p. 366)

Contemporary researchers have found less barbaric ways to investigate the importance of communication. In one classic study of isolation, five participants were paid to remain alone in a locked room. One lasted for 8 days. Three held out for 2 days, one commenting, “Never again.” The fifth participant lasted only 2 hours (Schachter, 1959).

Real-life experiences also demonstrate our strong need for contact. Reflecting on his seven years as a hostage in Lebanon, former news correspondent Terry Anderson said point-blank, “I would rather have had the worst companion than no companion at all” (Gawande, 2009).

You might claim that solitude would be a welcome relief at times. It’s true that all of us need time by ourselves, often more than we get. On the other hand, each of us has a point beyond which solitude becomes painful. In other words, we all need people. We all need to communicate.

PHYSICAL NEEDS

Communication is so important that its presence or absence affects health. People who process a negative experience by talking about it report improved life satisfaction, as well as enhanced mental and physical health, compared with those who only think privately about it (Francis, 2003; Sousa, 2002). Research conducted with police officers found that being able to talk easily with colleagues and supervisors about work-related trauma was linked to greater physical and mental health (Stephens & Long, 2000). And a broader study of over 3,500 adults revealed that as little as 10 minutes of talking a day, face to face or by phone, improves memory and boosts intellectual function (Ybarra et al., 2008).

In extreme cases, communication can even become a matter of life or death. As a Navy pilot, U.S. Senator John McCain was shot down over North Vietnam and held as a prisoner of war (POW) for six years, often in solitary confinement. POWs in his camp set up codes to send messages by tapping on walls to laboriously spell out words. McCain describes the importance of maintaining contact with one another despite serious risks:

The punishment for communicating could be severe, and a few POWs, having been caught and beaten for their efforts, had their spirits broken as their bodies were battered. Terrified of a return trip to the punishment room, they would lie still in their cells when their comrades tried to tap them up on the wall. Very few would remain uncommunicative for long. To suffer all this alone was less tolerable than torture. Withdrawing in silence from the fellowship of other Americans . . . was to us the approach of death. (McCain, 1999, p. 12)

Communication isn’t a necessity just for prisoners of war. Evidence gathered by a host of researchers (e.g., Holt-Lunstad et al., 2010; Parker-Pope, 2010; Yang et al., 2016) has shown that interpersonal communication is vital among civilians as well. For example:

- A meta-analysis of nearly 150 studies involving a total of over 300,000 participants found that socially connected people—those with strong networks of family and friends—live an average of 3.7 years longer than those who are socially isolated.

After spending a year alone in space, astronaut Scott Kelly described his biggest challenge: “I think the hardest part is being isolated in a physical sense from people on the ground that are important to you.” How satisfied are you with the amount and quality of personal contact in your life? What would be the ideal amount of contact?

Media Clip

Solitude and Connection: Wild

Striving to escape grief and a life plagued by personal mistakes, Cheryl Strayed (Reese Witherspoon) embarks on a solitary thousand-mile trek along the rugged Pacific Crest Trail.

In the wilderness, Strayed spends much of her time reflecting on the past and pondering her options for the future. In her self-enforced solitude, she also discovers the value of human connection. She eagerly seeks out encounters with other hikers to alleviate loneliness, satisfy practical needs for food and water, and answer questions about her own identity. Both solitude and communication help her come to terms with who she is and who she wants to become.

Strayed's journey illustrates many of the reasons we communicate. Not far into her adventure she exclaims to herself, "I like talking to people. Listening to people . . . that's a hobby of mine I hadn't even realized I had."

In her wilderness quest, Strayed learns a lesson that applies to us all: Solitude and reflection can prepare us to embark on healthier relationships.

- People with strong relationships have significantly lower risks of coronary disease, hypertension, and obesity than do people with less social integration.
- Divorced, separated, or widowed people are 5 to 10 times more likely to need hospitalization for mental illnesses than their married counterparts. Happily married people also have lower incidences of pneumonia, surgery, and cancer than single people. (It's important to note that the quality of the relationship is more important than the institution of marriage in these studies.)

Such research demonstrates the importance of meaningful personal relationships and explains why social scientists conclude that communication is indispensable for health. Not everyone needs the same amount of contact, and the quality of communication is almost certainly as important as the quantity. Nonetheless, the point remains: Personal communication is essential for our well-being.

IDENTITY NEEDS

Communication does more than enable us to survive. It is the primary way we learn who we are (Harwood, 2005). As you'll read in Chapter 3, our sense of identity comes from the ways we interact with other people. Are we smart or stupid, attractive or ugly, skillful or inept? The answers to these questions don't come from looking in the mirror. The reactions of others shape who we are.

Deprived of communication with others, we would have no sense of identity. Consider the case of the famous "Wild Boy of Aveyron," who spent his early childhood without any apparent human contact. The boy was discovered in January 1800 while digging for vegetables in a French village garden. He could not speak, and he showed no behaviors one would expect in a social human. More significant than this absence of social skills was his lack of any identity as a human being. As author Roger Shattuck (1980) put it, "The boy had no human sense of being in the world. He had no sense of himself as a person related to other persons" (p. 37). Only after the influence of a loving "mother" did the boy begin to behave as a human.

Contemporary accounts support the essential role communication plays in shaping identity. In some cases, feral children—those raised with limited or no human contact—have demonstrated communication patterns similar to those of animals they grew up around (Newton, 2002). They do not appear to have developed a sense of themselves as humans before interacting with other people. Similarly, Dani's Story (Lierow, 2011) tells of an abandoned child who was rescued by a loving family and taught to communicate. After considerable time and investment, she was ultimately able to say of herself, “I pretty.”

Each of us enters the world with little or no sense of identity. We gain an idea of who we are from the way others define us. As we explain in Chapter 3, the messages we receive in early childhood are the strongest identity shapers, but the influence of others continues throughout life.

SOCIAL NEEDS

Some social scientists have argued that besides helping define who we are, communication is the principal way relationships are created. For example, Julie Yingling (1994) asserts that children “talk friendships into existence.” The same can be said for adult relationships: It’s impossible to imagine how they could exist without communication. These relationships satisfy a variety of social needs, such as giving and receiving affection, having fun, helping others and being helped, and developing a sense of self-worth (Rubin et al., 1988). Because relationships with others are vital, some theorists have gone so far as to argue that communication is the primary goal of human existence. One anthropologist (Goldschmidt, 1990) calls the drive for meeting social needs through communication “the human career.”

There’s a strong link between the quality of communication and the success of relationships. For example, children who grow up in strong conversation-oriented families report having more satisfying same-sex friendships and romantic relationships when they become adults (Koesten, 2004). Women in one study reported that “socializing” contributed more to a satisfying life than virtually any other activity, including relaxing, shopping, eating, exercise, television, or prayer (Kahneman et al., 2004).

DARK SIDE OF COMMUNICATION

Loneliness and the Internet: A Delicate Balance

It’s Friday night and you have no plans. You don’t want to spend the evening by yourself, but it feels like a chore to go out and socialize. Instead, you decide to stay in and interact with others online—perhaps with friends, or maybe with strangers. Is that a good way to meet your social needs? The simple answer is “occasionally, but not regularly.”

Research about online communication and loneliness presents a mixed bag. Connecting with others online can help alleviate lonely feelings (Lee et al., 2013), particularly for those who find it challenging to get out and about (Cotten et al., 2013). On the other hand, there’s a correlation between loneliness and what social scientists call a preference for online social interaction (Chung, 2013). The cause-effect relationship isn’t always clear, but research shows that lonely people prefer to interact with others online, which can lead to problematic internet use, which can create a greater sense of loneliness (Kim et al., 2009; Tokunaga, 2016).

The key to healthy communication lies in a principle we discuss frequently in this book: all things in moderation. When online communication complements and reinforces in-person relationships, it can be a wonderful tool for meeting social needs. When it mostly or completely replaces face-to-face interaction, there may be cause for concern. The Assessing Your Communication box on page 24 can help you determine whether your online and in-person communication are in balance.

Despite knowing that communication is crucial to social satisfaction, evidence suggests that many people aren't very successful at managing their interpersonal relationships. For example, one-third of Americans say they've never interacted with their neighbors, up from one-fifth who said the same just a few decades ago (Poon, 2015). Research also shows that the number of friendships is in decline. One survey (McPherson et al., 2006) reported that in 1985, Americans had an average of 2.94 close friends. Twenty years later, that number had dropped to 2.08. It's worth noting that in this same study, more-educated Americans reported having larger and more diverse networks. In other words, higher education can enhance your relational life as well as your intellect.

PRACTICAL NEEDS

Along with satisfying physical, identity, and social needs, communication is essential in dealing with more practical matters. It's the tool that lets us tell the hairstylist to take just a little off the sides, direct the doctor to where it hurts, and inform the plumber that the broken pipe needs attention now!

Beyond these obvious needs, a wealth of research demonstrates that communication is an essential ingredient for success in virtually every career. (See the At Work box on page 9.) On-the-job communication skills can even make the difference between life and death for doctors, nurses, and other medical practitioners. Researchers discovered that "communication failures" in hospitals and doctors' offices were linked to more than 1,700 U.S. deaths in a recent five-year period (Bailey, 2016). Studies also show a significant difference between the communication skills of physicians who had no malpractice claims against them and doctors with previous claims (Carroll, 2015).

Communication is just as important outside of work. For example, married couples who are effective communicators report happier relationships than less skillful husbands and wives (Ridley et al., 2001)—a finding that has been supported across cultures (Rehman & Holtzworth-Munroe, 2007). And the effects of work-family conflict—a common occurrence that negatively affects marital satisfaction—can be mitigated with constructive communication (Carroll et al., 2013). In school, grade-point averages of college students are related positively to their communication competence (Hawken et al., 1991). In addition, school adjustment, dropout rate, and overall school achievement are highly related to students' having strong, supportive relationships (Heard, 2007).

Psychologist Abraham Maslow (1968) suggests that human needs fall into five categories, each of which must be satisfied before we concern ourselves with the next one. As you read about each need, think about the ways in which communication is often necessary to satisfy it. The most basic needs are physical: sufficient air, water, food, and rest and the ability to reproduce as a species. The second category of Maslow's needs involves safety: protection from threats to our well-being. Beyond physical and safety concerns are the social needs described earlier. Next, Maslow suggests that each of us has the need for self-esteem: the desire to believe that

@work Communication and Career Advancement

No matter the field, research supports what experienced workers already know—that communication skills are crucial in finding and succeeding in a job. A survey of business leaders rated abilities in spoken and written communication as the most important skills for college graduates to possess (Supiano, 2013). In a later study with similar results, employers told college students that oral communication skills, and particularly interpersonal communication, are essential for workplace success (Coffelt et al., 2016). It's no wonder that job ads ask for competence in "oral and written communication" more than any other skill set—by a wide margin (Anderson & Gantz, 2013).

Once you're hired, the need for communication skills is important in virtually every career. Engineers spend the bulk of their working lives speaking and listening, mostly in one-on-one and small-group settings (Darling & Dannels, 2003). Accounting professionals spend 80 percent of their time on the job communicating with others, individually and in groups (Nellermoe et al., 1999). Oral and written communication skills are also vital in the computer industry, according to Silicon Valley employers (Stevens, 2005). Writing in The Scientist magazine, a commentator echoed this sentiment: "If I give any advice, it is that you can never do enough training around your overall communication skills" (Richman, 2002).

we are worthwhile, valuable people. The final category of needs involves self-actualization: the desire to develop our potential to the maximum, to become the best person we can be.

THE COMMUNICATION PROCESS

So far, we have talked about communication as if its meaning were perfectly clear. In fact, scholars have debated the definition of communication for years (Littlejohn, 2008). Despite their many disagreements, most would concur that at its essence, communication is about using messages to generate meanings (Korn et al., 2000). Notice how this basic definition holds true across a variety of contexts—public speaking, small groups, mass media, and so forth. The goal of this section is to explain how messages and meanings are created in interpersonal communication and to describe the many factors involved in this complex process.

EARLY MODELS OF COMMUNICATION

As the old saying goes, "A picture is worth a thousand words." With that principle in mind, social scientists of the 1950s created models of the communication process. These early, simplistic models characterized communication as a one-way, linear event—something that a sender "does" by encoding a message and delivering it to a passive receiver who decodes it. This one-way process resembles an archer (the sender) shooting an arrow (the message) at a target (the receiver). For some examples of