

EIGHTH
EDITION

WRITING ANALYTICALLY

DAVID ROSENWASSER • JILL STEPHEN

Fit your coursework into your hectic life.

Make the most of your time by learning your way. Access the resources you need to succeed wherever, whenever.

Study with digital flashcards, listen to audio textbooks, and take quizzes.

Review your current course grade and compare your progress with your peers.

Get the free MindTap Mobile App and learn wherever you are.

Break Limitations. Create your own potential, and be unstoppable with MindTap.

MINDTAP. POWERED BY YOU.

WRITING ANALYTICALLY

EIGHTH EDITION

DAVID ROSENWASSER
Muhlenberg College

JILL STEPHEN
Muhlenberg College

This is an electronic version of the print textbook. Due to electronic rights restrictions, some third party content may be suppressed. Editorial review has deemed that any suppressed content does not materially affect the overall learning experience. The publisher reserves the right to remove content from this title at any time if subsequent rights restrictions require it. For valuable information on pricing, previous editions, changes to current editions, and alternate formats, please visit www.cengage.com/highered to search by ISBN#, author, title, or keyword for materials in your areas of interest.

Important Notice: Media content referenced within the product description or the product text may not be available in the eBook version.

Writing Analytically 8e
David Rosenwasser and Jill
Stephen

Product Manager: Laura Ross

Content Developer: Elinor Gregory

Product Assistant: Shelby
Nathanson

Marketing Manager: Kina Lara

Senior Content Project Manager:
Aimee Bear

Senior Art Director: Marissa Falco

IP Analyst: Ann Hoffman

IP Project Manager: Betsy
Hathaway

Manufacturing Planner: Betsy
Donaghey

Production Service: MPS Limited

Compositor: MPS Limited

Text Designer: MPS Limited

Cover Designer: Marissa Falco

Cover Image: Jorg Greuel/
DigitalVision/Getty Images

© 2019, 2017, 2012 Cengage Learning, Inc.

Unless otherwise noted, all content is © Cengage

ALL RIGHTS RESERVED. No part of this work covered by the copyright herein may be reproduced or distributed in any form or by any means, except as permitted by U.S. copyright law, without the prior written permission of the copyright owner.

For product information and technology assistance, contact us at Cengage Customer & Sales Support, 1-800-354-9706.

For permission to use material from this text or product, submit all requests online at www.cengage.com/permissions. Further permissions questions can be emailed to permissionrequest@cengage.com.

Library of Congress Control Number: 2017954666

Student Edition:
ISBN: 978-1-337-55946-1

Loose-leaf Edition:
ISBN: 978-1-337-55947-8

Cengage
20 Channel Center Street
Boston, MA 02210
USA

Cengage is a leading provider of customized learning solutions with employees residing in nearly 40 different countries and sales in more than 125 countries around the world. Find your local representative at: www.cengage.com.

Cengage products are represented in Canada by Nelson Education, Ltd.

To learn more about Cengage platforms and services, visit www.cengage.com.

Purchase any of our products at your local college store or at our preferred online store www.cengagebrain.com.

BRIEF CONTENTS

Preface	xvii
UNIT I The Analytical Frame of Mind	1
1 The Five Analytical Moves	2
2 Reading Analytically	38
3 Interpretation: Moving from Observation to Implication	70
4 Responding to Traditional Writing Assignments More Analytically	98
5 Thinking Like a Writer	116
UNIT II Writing the Analytical Paper	147
6 Reasoning from Evidence to Claims	148
7 Finding and Evolving a Thesis	178
8 Conversing with Sources: Writing the Researched Paper	213
9 Finding, Evaluating, and Citing Sources	242
UNIT III Matters of Form	265
10 From Paragraphs to Papers: Forms and Formats Across the Curriculum	266
11 Style: Choosing Words, Shaping Sentences	299
12 Nine Basic Writing Errors (BWEs) and How to Fix Them	341
APPENDIX	369
INDEX	376

CONTENTS

Preface	xvii
UNIT I The Analytical Frame of Mind	1
CHAPTER 1	2
The Five Analytical Moves	2
Writing as a Tool of Thought	2
Why Faculty Want Analysis	3
Analysis Is a Search for Meaning	3
Analysis Does More than Break a Subject into Its Parts	4
Distinguishing Analysis from Summary, Expressive Writing, and Argument	5
Analysis and Summary	6
Analysis and Expressive Writing	7
Analysis and Argument	7
Counterproductive Habits of Mind	10
Habit: The Judgment Reflex	10
Cures for the Judgment Reflex	11
TRY THIS 1.1: Experiment with Adjectives and Adverbs	11
Habit: Naturalizing Our Assumptions (Overpersonalizing)	11
VOICES FROM ACROSS THE CURRICULUM: Arguments vs. Opinions: A Political Scientist Speaks	12
Habit: Generalizing	12
Cures for the Problem of Generalizing	13
TRY THIS 1.2: Distinguishing Abstract from Concrete Words	13
VOICES FROM ACROSS THE CURRICULUM: Habits of Mind in Psychology: A Psychologist Speaks	13
Get Comfortable with Uncertainty	14
Habit: The Slot-Filler Mentality (Five-Paragraph Form)	14
Learn to Notice	15
The Five Analytical Moves	16
Move 1: Suspend Judgment	16
Move 2: Define Significant Parts and How They Are Related	16
NOTICE & FOCUS (RANKING)	17
“Interesting,” “Revealing,” “Strange”	18
TRY THIS 1.3: NOTICE & FOCUS Fieldwork	18
Noticing and Rhetorical Analysis	18
TRY THIS 1.4: Doing NOTICE & FOCUS with a Room	19
Doing Exploratory Writing in the Observation Stage: Freewriting	19

Move 3: Make the Implicit Explicit. Push Observations to Implications by ASKING “So WHAT?”	21
ASKING “So WHAT?”	23
ASKING “So WHAT?” in a Chain	23
TRY THIS 1.5: Track the “So WHAT?” Question	24
TRY THIS 1.6: Inferring Implications from Observations	25
Move 4: Look for Patterns of Repetition and Contrast and for Anomalies (THE METHOD)	25
The Steps of THE METHOD	26
Two Examples of THE METHOD Generating Ideas	27
Doing THE METHOD on a Poem	29
TRY THIS 1.7: Doing THE METHOD on a Poem	31
Troubleshooting THE METHOD	31
TRY THIS 1.8: Do THE METHOD on a Visual Image	32
TRY THIS 1.9: Do THE METHOD on a Reading	32
Move 5: Keep Reformulating Questions and Explanations	32
Summing Up: Analyzing Whistler’s Mother	33
Analysis and Personal Associations	35
Becoming a Detective	36
Assignments: The Five Analytical Moves	36
CHAPTER 2	38
Reading Analytically	38
Becoming Conversant Instead of Reading for the Gist	38
Beyond the Banking Model of Education	39
Rejecting the Transparent Theory of Language	39
Seek to Understand the Reading Fairly on Its Own Terms	40
How to Write a Critique	41
VOICES FROM ACROSS THE CURRICULUM: What Do We Mean by Critical Reading? A Music Professor Speaks	43
Focus on Individual Sentences	43
POINTING	44
Using Quotation	44
PARAPHRASE × 3	45
TRY THIS 2.1: Experiment with PARAPHRASE × 3	47
TRY THIS 2.2: Paraphrase and Implication	47
PASSAGE-BASED FOCUSED FREEWRITING	47
TRY THIS 2.3: Do PASSAGE-BASED FOCUSED FREEWRITING	52
TRY THIS 2.4: Writing and Reading with Others: A Sequence of Activities	52
Keep a Commonplace Book	53
Situate the Reading Rhetorically	53
Find THE PITCH, THE COMPLAINT, and THE MOMENT	54
TRY THIS 2.5: Locating THE PITCH AND THE COMPLAINT	56

Focus on the Structure of Thinking in a Reading	56
UNCOVERING ASSUMPTIONS	56
TRY THIS 2.6: UNCOVERING ASSUMPTIONS Implied by a Statement	57
TRY THIS 2.7: UNCOVERING ASSUMPTIONS: Fieldwork	58
TRACKING BINARIES in a Reading	58
REFORMULATING BINARIES	60
TRY THIS 2.8: REFORMULATING BINARIES: Fieldwork	62
TRY THIS 2.9: Practice TRACKING REFORMULATED BINARIES in a Reading	63
APPLY a READING as a LENS	63
Assignments: Reading Analytically	68
CHAPTER 3	70
Interpretation: Moving from Observation to Implication	70
The Big Picture	70
Making Interpretations Plausible: Interpretive Contexts	71
Context and the Making of Meaning	72
Specifying an Interpretive Context: A Brief Example	73
Intention as an Interpretive Context	74
What Is and Isn't "Meant" to Be Analyzed	76
Avoiding the Extremes: Neither "Fortune Cookie" nor "Anything Goes"	77
The Fortune Cookie School of Interpretation	77
The Anything Goes School of Interpretation	77
Implications Versus Hidden Meanings	78
Figurative Logic: Reasoning with Metaphors	79
TRY THIS 3.1: Uncovering the Logic of Figurative Language	81
TRY THIS 3.2: Analyzing the Figurative Language of Politics	81
SEEMS TO BE ABOUT X, BUT COULD ALSO BE (OR IS "REALLY") ABOUT Y	82
SEEMS TO BE ABOUT X . . . : An Example	83
TRY THIS 3.3: Apply the Formula SEEMS TO BE ABOUT X, BUT COULD ALSO BE (OR IS "REALLY") ABOUT Y	84
Making an Interpretation: The Example of a New Yorker Cover	84
Description of a New Yorker Cover, Dated October 9, 2000	84
Using THE METHOD to Identify Patterns of Repetition and Contrast	86
Pushing Observations to Conclusions: Selecting an Interpretive Context	87
Arriving at an Interpretive Conclusion: Making Choices	88
Making the Interpretation Plausible	89
Making Interpretations Plausible Across the Curriculum	89
Interpreting Statistical Data	90
VOICES FROM ACROSS THE CURRICULUM:
Interpreting the Numbers: A Psychology Professor Speaks	92
A Brief Glossary of Common Logical Fallacies	93
Assignments: Interpretation: Moving from Observation to Implication	97

CHAPTER 4	98
Responding to Traditional Writing Assignments More Analytically	98
Interpreting Writing Assignments	98
Find the Analytical Potential: Locate an Area of Uncertainty	99
Six Rules of Thumb for Responding to Assignments More Analytically	100
Rule 1: Reduce Scope	100
Rule 2: Study the Wording of Topics for Unstated Questions	100
Rule 3: Suspect Your First Responses	101
Rule 4: Begin with Questions, Not Answers	101
Rule 5: Expect to Become Interested	101
Rule 6: Write All of the Time About What You Are Studying	102
Summary	103
Strategies for Making Summaries More Analytical	103
Personal Response: The Reaction Paper	105
Strategies for Making Personal Responses More Analytical	106
Agree/Disagree	107
Comparison/Contrast	108
Strategies for Making Comparison/Contrast More Analytical, Including DIFFERENCE WITHIN SIMILARITY	109
Definition	111
Strategies for Making Definition More Analytical	112
Assignments: Responding to Traditional Writing Assignments More Analytically	113
CHAPTER 5	116
Thinking Like a Writer	116
Process and Product	116
A Review of Some Strategies from Writing Analytically for Making Writing Happen	117
Making Writing Happen	118
Freewriting Revisited	119
TRY THIS 5.1: Freewriting on a Single Word or Phrase	120
Observation Exercises: The Value of Close Description	120
TRY THIS 5.2: Three Descriptive Freewrites	121
TRY THIS 5.3: Hemingway's Five-Finger Exercise	121
Alternative Models of Revision: New Starts and the Back Burner	122
Closing Your Eyes as You Speak	123
When Class Members Become Audience: What Did You Hear?	124
Writing on Computers vs. Writing on Paper	124
On Keeping a Writer's Notebook: Things to Try	126
Collecting Possible Starting Points for Writing	126
Collecting Words, Similes, and Metaphors: Not Just for Poets	128

“Three Minutes”: An Ongoing, Essay-Writing Prompt	130
TRY THIS 5.4: Three Minutes on Attention and Distraction	131
Writing from Life: The Personal Essay	132
TRY THIS 5.5: Something You Know How to Do	133
TRY THIS 5.6: Writing the Self	134
TRY THIS 5.7: Reconstruct and Reflect	134
TRY THIS 5.8: A Childhood Experience that Changed, Somehow, Your View of the World	135
Reading Like a Writer: Text Marking and Listing	135
Beyond Critique: Alternative Ways for Writers to Respond to Other Writers	136
Procedures for Description-Based, Small-Group Peer Review	137
Procedures for One-on-One Peer Review: The Writing Center Model	138
A Word on Google Docs and Interactive Blogging	140
Writing with Other Writers	141
Writing Marathons: Taking Writing on the Road	141
Writers’ Boot Camp	142
How to Assess Your Own Writing: Some Rubrics for Self-Evaluation	143
Short List of Things That Go Wrong	144
Some Do’s and Don’ts of Good Writing	144
Some Useful Mantras for Writers	146
Assignment: Thinking Like a Writer	146
Write a Literacy Narrative	146
UNIT II Writing the Analytical Paper	147
CHAPTER 6	148
Reasoning from Evidence to Claims	148
Linking Evidence and Claims	148
The Functions of Evidence	149
“Because I Say So”: Unsubstantiated Claims	149
Distinguishing Evidence from Claims	150
TRY THIS 6.1: Distinguishing Evidence from Claims	151
Giving Evidence a Point: Making Details Speak	151
More than Just “the Facts”: What Counts as Evidence?	153
VOICES FROM ACROSS THE CURRICULUM: Questions of Relevance         and Methodology: A Political Science Professor Speaks	154
The Rules of Argument	155
Syllogism and Enthymeme	156
Toulmin’s Alternative Model of the Syllogism	157
Rogerian Argument and Practical Reasoning	159
Deduction and Induction: Two Ways of Linking Evidence and Claims	160
1 on 10 and 10 on 1	162
DOING 10 ON 1	162

Organizing Papers Using 1 on 10	164
A Potential Problem with 1 on 10: Mere Demonstration	164
DOING 10 ON 1: Saying More About Less	164
A Potential Problem with 10 on 1: Not Demonstrating the Representativeness of Your Example	165
TRY THIS 6.2: DOING 10 ON 1 with Newspaper Visuals	167
TRY THIS 6.3: DOING 10 ON 1 with a Reading	167
10 on 1 and Disciplinary Conventions	168
Larger Organizational Schemes: Writing Papers Based on 1 on 10 and 10 on 1	168
The Problem of Five-Paragraph Form: A Reductive Version of 1 on 10	168
Rehabilitating Five-Paragraph Form	171
Outline for a Viable Version of Five-Paragraph Form	171
Pan, Track, and Zoom: “Directing” Your Paper	172
A Template for Organizing Papers Using 10 on 1	173
DOING 10 ON 1 to Find an Organizing Claim: A Student Paper	174
TRY THIS 6.4: Marking Claims, Evidence, and Complications in a Draft	175
Assignments: Reasoning from Evidence to Claims	176
CHAPTER 7	178
Finding and Evolving a Thesis	178
The Big Picture	179
What a Good Thesis Is and Does	180
Potential Problems with Thesis-Driven Writing	182
Making a Thesis Evolve	182
Developing a Thesis Is More than Repeating an Idea	182
The Thesis as Camera Lens: The Reciprocal Relationship Between Thesis and Evidence	183
Induction and Deduction: Two Paths a Thesis May Take	184
Making a Thesis Evolve: A Brief, Inductive Example	185
Making a Thesis Evolve: A Brief, Deductive Example	186
The Evolving Thesis as Hypothesis and Conclusion in the Natural and Social Sciences	187
VOICES FROM ACROSS THE CURRICULUM: The Hypothesis in the Natural and Social Sciences: Three Professors Speak	187
Evolving a Working Thesis in an Exploratory Draft: The Example of Las Meninas	188
From Details to Ideas: Arriving at a Working Thesis in an Exploratory Draft	191
Six Steps for Finding and Evolving a Thesis in an Exploratory Draft	192
Knowing When to Stop: How Much Revising Is Enough?	198
Practice Tracking Thesis Statements in Finished Drafts	199
Tracking the Thesis in a Final Draft: The Example of In Bruges	199
Introductions, Conclusions, and the Thesis	202
Setting Up the Thesis: Two Tasks	202
Making the Thesis Matter: Providing an Interpretive Context	203
How Much of the Thesis Belongs in the Introduction?	204

The Conclusion: Returning the Thesis to the Larger Conversation	204
VOICES FROM ACROSS THE CURRICULUM: Recognizing Your Thesis: A History Professor Speaks	205
How to Word Thesis Statements	205
Put X in Tension with Y	205
TRY THIS 7.1: Spotting the Tension in Good Thesis Statements	206
Is It Okay to Phrase a Thesis as a Question?	207
VOICES FROM ACROSS THE CURRICULUM: Getting Beyond the All-Purpose Thesis: A Dance Professor Speaks	207
Recognizing and Fixing Weak Thesis Statements	207
Weak Thesis Type 1: The Thesis Makes No Claim	208
Weak Thesis Type 2: The Thesis Is Obviously True or Is a Statement of Fact	209
Weak Thesis Type 3: The Thesis Restates Conventional Wisdom	209
Weak Thesis Type 4: The Thesis Bases Its Claim on Personal Conviction	210
Weak Thesis Type 5: The Thesis Makes an Overly Broad Claim	211
Assignment: Finding and Evolving a Thesis	212
CHAPTER 8	213
Conversing with Sources: Writing the Researched Paper	213
The Big Picture	213
Using Sources Analytically	214
“Source Anxiety” and What to Do About It	215
The Conversation Analogy	216
Conversing with a Source: A Brief Example	217
Ways to Use a Source as a Point of Departure	218
Six Strategies for Analyzing Sources	219
Strategy 1: Make Your Sources Speak	219
Strategy 2: Attend Carefully to the Language of Your Sources by Quoting or Paraphrasing	220
Strategy 3: Supply Ongoing Analysis of Sources (Don’t Wait Until the End)	221
VOICES FROM ACROSS THE CURRICULUM: Bringing Sources Together: A Psychology Professor Speaks	222
Strategy 4: Use Your Sources to Ask Questions, Not Just Provide Answers	222
Strategy 5: Put Your Sources Into Conversation with One Another	225
Strategy 6: Find Your Own Role in the Conversation	227
VOICES FROM ACROSS THE CURRICULUM: Engaging Sources in the Sciences: A Biology Professor Speaks	230
Using Sources Analytically: An Example	230
Integrating Quotations Into Your Paper	231
Preparing an Abstract	234
What Does Plagiarism Do to the Conversation?	235
Frequently Asked Questions (FAQS) about Plagiarism	236
Assignments: Conversing with Sources: Writing the Researched Paper	238

CHAPTER 9	242
Finding, Evaluating, and Citing Sources	242
Three Rules of Thumb for Getting Started with Research	242
Start with Scholarly Indexes, Abstracts, and Bibliographies	243
Specialized Dictionaries and Encyclopedias	244
Finding Your Sources: Articles and Books	244
VOICES FROM ACROSS THE CURRICULUM: Finding Quality Sources: Two Professors Speak	245
Finding Quality on the Web	246
Understanding Domain Names	246
Print Corollaries	247
Web-Published Gems	247
Wikipedia, Google, and Blogs	248
Asking the Right Questions	249
Subscriber-Only Databases	250
TRY THIS 9.1: Tuning in to Your Research Environment: Four Exercises	251
Eight Tips for Locating and Evaluating Electronic Sources	251
Tip #1: Backspacing	251
Tip #2: Using WHOIS	251
Tip #3: Beware of the ~ in a Web Address	251
Tip #4: Phrase Searching	252
Tip #5: Title Searching	252
Tip #6: Wikipedia Talk Tab	252
Tip #7: Full Text from Library Databases	252
Tip #8: Archives of Older Published Periodicals	252
Four Steps Toward Productive Research Across the Disciplines	253
The Four Documentation Styles: Similarities and Differences	255
APA Style, 6th Edition	257
Chicago Style, 16th Edition	258
CSE Style Employing Name-Year (Author-Date) System, 8th Edition	260
CSE Style Employing Citation Sequence System, 8th Edition	261
MLA Style, 8th Edition	262
Guidelines for Finding, Evaluating, and Citing Sources	263
UNIT III Matters of Form	265
CHAPTER 10	266
From Paragraphs to Papers: Forms and Formats Across the Curriculum	266
The Two Functions of Formats	266
Using Formats Heuristically: An Example	267

The Common Structure of Most Academic Writing	268
Science Format Compared with Other Kinds of Writing	268
VOICES FROM ACROSS THE CURRICULUM: Writing in the Sciences: A Biochemistry Professor Speaks	269
VOICES FROM ACROSS THE CURRICULUM: How to Write—and Read—Scientific Formats: Two Professors Speak	270
Three Organizing Strategies	271
Climactic Order: Saving the Best for Last	271
Comparison/Contrast: Two Formats	271
Concessions and Refutations: Giving and Taking Away	272
TRY THIS 10.1: Locating Concessions and Refutations	273
What Introductions Do: “Why What I’m Saying Matters”	273
How Much to Introduce Up Front: Typical Problems	274
VOICES FROM ACROSS THE CURRICULUM: Avoiding Strong Claims in the Introduction: An Economics Professor Speaks	276
Some Good Ways to Begin a Paper	276
What Conclusions Do: The Final “SO WHAT?”	278
VOICES FROM ACROSS THE CURRICULUM: Beyond Restatement: A Business and a Political Science Professor Speak	279
Solving Typical Problems in Conclusions	279
Introductions and Conclusions Across the Curriculum	281
Introductory Paragraphs in the Humanities	281
Using Procedural Openings: Introductions and Conclusions in the Social Sciences	282
VOICES FROM ACROSS THE CURRICULUM: Using Procedural Openings: A Political Science Professor Speaks	283
Putting an Issue or Question in Context	283
VOICES FROM ACROSS THE CURRICULUM: Providing an Introductory Context: A Political Science Professor Speaks	283
VOICES FROM ACROSS THE CURRICULUM: Framing Research Questions and Hypotheses: A Political Science Professor Speaks	284
Writing Introductions in the Sciences	284
VOICES FROM ACROSS THE CURRICULUM: Introductions in the Sciences: Three Professors Speak	284
Integration of Citations in a Literature Review: A Brief Example	286
Introductions in Scientific Papers: A Brief Example	286
Writing Conclusions in the Sciences: The Discussion Section	286
VOICES FROM ACROSS THE CURRICULUM: Writing Conclusions in the Sciences: Two Professors Speak	287
Conclusions in Scientific Papers: A Brief Example	288
VOICES FROM ACROSS THE CURRICULUM: Ethos and Style in Scientific Writing: A Biochemistry Professor Speaks	288
The Idea of the Paragraph	288

How Long?: Paragraphs, Readers, and Writers	289
Linking the Sentences in Paragraphs: Minding the Gaps	290
What a Paragraph Does: The Paragraph as Movement of Mind	291
TRY THIS 10.2: Label the Function of the Sentences in a Paragraph	292
TRY THIS 10.3: Identify the Structure of a Paragraph	294
The Shaping Force of Transitions	295
TRY THIS 10.4: Tracking Transitions	297
Assignments: From Paragraphs to Papers: Forms and Formats Across the Curriculum	297
CHAPTER 11	299
Style: Choosing Words, Shaping Sentences	299
Seeing Style as Inseparable From Meaning	299
About Prescriptive Style Manuals: A Word of Warning	300
Sentence Logic: Seeing How the Parts of a Sentence Are Related	301
Finding the Spine of a Sentence: Subjects and Predicates	302
Kinds of Verbs: Transitive, Intransitive, and Linking	303
Verbals: Verb Forms that Function as Other Parts of Speech	304
Sentence Combining: Coordination	305
Sentence Combining: Subordination	307
TRY THIS 11.1: Identify Clauses and Conjunctions	309
Seeing the Shape of Sentences: Why Commas Matter	310
TRY THIS 11.2: Find and Explain Commas in a Piece of Writing	311
What Punctuation Marks Say: A Quick-Hit Guide	312
Emphasis and the Order of Clauses: The Importance of What Comes Last	313
TRY THIS 11.3: Order Clauses in a Sentence for Emphasis	314
Embedding Modifiers: Relative Clauses, Words, and Phrases	314
Periodic and Cumulative Styles: Two Ways of Locating Closure	316
The Periodic Sentence: Delay Closure to Achieve Emphasis	317
The Cumulative Sentence: Start Fast to Build Momentum	318
TRY THIS 11.4: Write Periodic and Cumulative Sentences	319
Symmetry and Sense: Balance, Antithesis, and Parallelism	320
Parallel Structure: Put Parallel Information into Parallel Form	320
TRY THIS 11.5: Correct Errors in Parallelism	321
Two Powerful Forms of Parallelism: Antithesis and Chiasmus	321
“Official Style”	322
Finding the Action in a Sentence: “To Be” Or Not “To Be”	322
TRY THIS 11.6: Find Active Verbs in Your Sentences	324
Active and Passive Voice: Emphasizing the Doer or the Action	324
TRY THIS 11.7: Analyze the Effect of Passive Voice	325
TRY THIS 11.8: Write Passive and Active Voice Sentences	325
Expletives: Beginning with “It Is” or “There Is”	326

Concrete vs. Evaluative Adjectives and Intensifiers:
What’s Bad About “Good” and “Bad”	326
Concrete and Abstract Diction	327
Latinate Diction	328
Etymology: Finding a Word’s Physical History	329
TRY THIS 11.9: Tracing Word Histories	329
“Right” and “Wrong” Words: Shades of Meaning	330
Tone	331
TRY THIS 11.10: Analyze Tone-Deaf Prose	332
TRY THIS 11.11: Analyze Effective Tone	332
The Politics of Language	332
Ethos, Audience, and Levels of Style	333
Transparent vs. Opaque Styles: Knowing When to Be Visible	333
The Person Question: When and When Not to Use “I”	334
VOICES FROM ACROSS THE CURRICULUM: Using the First-Person “I”:
Two Professors Speak	335
VOICES FROM ACROSS THE CURRICULUM: Sentence Style in Science
Writing: A Biochemistry Professor Speaks	335
Formal vs. Colloquial Styles	336
The Problem of Inflated Diction	337
Jargon: When to Use Insider Language	337
Style Analysis: A Summary of Things to Look For	338
Assignments: Style: Choosing Words, Shaping Sentences	339
CHAPTER 12	341
Nine Basic Writing Errors (BWEs) and How to Fix Them	341
The Concept of Basic Writing Errors (BWEs)	341
Nine Basic Writing Errors	342
BWE 1: Sentence Fragments	343
Noun Clause (No Predicate) as a Fragment	343
Verbal as a Fragment	343
Subordinate Clause as a Fragment	344
Using Dashes and Colons to Correct Fragments	344
BWE 2: Comma Splices and Fused (or Run-On) Sentences	345
Comma Splice	345
Comma Splice	345
Cures for the Perpetual Comma Splicer	346
Fused (or Run-on) Sentence	346
Comma Splices with Conjunctive Adverbs	347
BWE 3: Errors in Subject–Verb Agreement	348
Agreement Problem: Plural Subject, Singular Verb	348
Agreement Problem: Singular Subject, Plural Verb	348

Agreement Problem: “Each” Must Take Singular Verb	349
A Note on Dialects and Standard Written English	349
BWE 4: Shifts in Sentence Structure (Faulty Predication)	350
Faulty Predication	350
Faulty Predication	350
BWE 5: Errors in Pronoun Reference	351
Pronoun-Antecedent Agreement	351
Pronoun Error: Plural Pronoun with Singular Antecedent	351
Gender-Neutral “They” and Pronoun Usage	351
Pronoun Error: Ambiguous Reference	352
Pronoun Error: Broad Reference	353
BWE 6: Misplaced Modifiers and Dangling Participles	354
Misplaced Modifier: Modifier Appears to Modify Wrong Word	354
Misplaced Modifier: Modifier Appears to Modify Wrong Word	354
Dangling Participle: Subject That Participle Modifies Does Not Appear in the Sentence	354
BWE 7: Errors in Using Possessive Apostrophes	355
Apostrophe Error	355
Apostrophe Error	355
BWE 8: Comma Errors	356
Comma Error: Comma Missing After Introductory Phrase	356
Comma Error: Comma Missing After Introductory Phrase	356
Comma Error: Two Commas Needed Around Parenthetical Element	356
A Note on Restrictive versus Nonrestrictive Elements	357
Comma Error: Two Commas Needed Around Parenthetical Element	357
Comma Error: Restrictive Elements Should Not Be Enclosed Within Commas	357
BWE 9: Spelling/Diction Errors That Interfere with Meaning	358
Spelling/Diction Error: “It’s” versus “Its”	358
Spelling/Diction Error: “Their” versus “There” versus “They’re”	359
Spelling/Diction Error: “Then” versus “Than”	359
Spelling/Diction Error: “Effect” vs. “Affect”	359
Correctness vs. Usage: Grammar Rules and Social Convention	360
Usage: How Language Customs Change	360
Usage: Examples of Right and Wrong vs. Etiquette	361
When Usage Begins to Change Grammar	362
Usage as Cultural Marker	363
TRY THIS 12.1: Discover the Rationale for Usage Choices	364
Glossary of Grammatical Terms	364
Assignments: Nine Basic Writing Errors (BWEs) and How to Fix Them	368

APPENDIX 369

INDEX 376

PREFACE

Nearly three decades ago, we started writing the book that would become Writing Analytically. It is, as far as we know, still the only book-length text available focused on analytical writing. Analysis is not the only form of writing that students need to learn, but it is the one they will most often be called on to do in college and beyond. We continue to believe in the goal of helping students adopt analytical habits of mind, because we see this as the best way to help students become adults who are capable of sustained acts of reflection in a culture that doesn't sufficiently promote this goal.

Our aim in this book has been to evolve a common language for talking about writing, one that can move beyond the specialized vocabularies of different academic disciplines. We have worked to isolate and define the specific, writing-based cognitive skills that effective writers have at their disposal, skills that many students lack or simply don't recognize in their own thinking. These skills have become “the heuristics”—the moves and strategies—at the heart of the book.

Writing Analytically was something of an accident for us, one of those things you think will be a short detour in life that turns out to be a main road. The college at which we had just arrived was in the process of developing a Writing Across the Curriculum (WAC) program in which all faculty, not just English department faculty, would be teaching writing-intensive courses. Since we were the only ones on campus with training in writing pedagogy, we were asked to offer a week-long seminar for faculty on how to teach writing.

During the early years offering the seminar, we asked faculty to read the usual essays about writing that graduate students in English, Rhetoric, and Composition normally read. We asked our colleagues to freewrite about these materials and to keep a journal of their responses to the reading and to seminar discussion—and, if they were willing, to share these with us. And share they did. Their responses were filled with insecurity and self-doubt (“You want me to immerse myself in the welter of confusion that my students are experiencing as they try to learn?”) and sometimes with anger (“So you want my students to sit in a circle and share their feelings about DNA?”). Prompted by this kind of honest talk across disciplinary lines, we started out on our project of studying what faculty wanted from student writing, and what students might not readily understand about the kinds of writing they were being asked to do in their college courses—something that our lives inside an English department might not have inspired us to do.

The clearest consensus we have found among college faculty is, in fact, on the kind of writing they say they want from their students: not issue-based argument, not personal reflection (the “reaction” paper), not passive summary, but analysis, with its patient and methodical inquiry into the meaning of information. Here, in brief, is what we have learned about what faculty want:

- Analysis rather than passive summary
- Analysis before argument: understanding in depth before taking a stand
- Alternatives to agree-disagree & like-dislike responses
- Tolerance of uncertainty
- Respect for complexity
- Ability to apply theories from reading, using them as lenses
- Ability to use secondary sources in ways other than plugging them in as “answers.”

We also discovered that there was no common language out there for talking about analysis with students and faculty beyond the simple definition of dividing a subject into its parts. Books on writing tended to devote a chapter at most to the subject, and sometimes as little as a couple of paragraphs in a chapter on rhetorical modes. Brief guides on writing in particular subject areas (for example, writing about economics, writing about film) tended to do a better job of explaining analytical habits of mind. As useful as they are, however, these books don't easily help students recognize common methods and values, as they move from course to course and department to department.

Here, in brief, are some definitions of analysis that we have derived from our work with faculty across the curriculum:

- Analysis seeks to discover what something means. An analytical argument makes claims for how something might be best understood, and in what context.
- Analysis deliberately delays evaluation and judgment.
- Analysis begins in and values uncertainty rather than starting from settled convictions.
- Analytical arguments are usually pluralistic; they tend to try on more than one way of thinking about how something might be best understood.

But these definitions alone are not enough. We thought, and still do, that the key to improving students' writing is helping them to become more aware of their own habits of mind. We thought, and still do, that this was a matter of attitude, not just of skills and knowledge of rules about writing. We believed, and still do, that process-oriented pedagogy need not be implicitly Romantic in theory and practice, but could instead—in keeping with the ideas of John Dewey—be methodical, consisting of teachable mental activities that students could consciously develop and practice, both individually and together.

Going into its eighth edition, Writing Analytically has been through many changes, but it is still what we hoped it would be in the beginning: a process-oriented guide to analytical writing that can serve students' needs at different stages in their college careers and in different disciplines. We hope this new edition will continue to provide a basis for conversation—between faculty and students, between students and students, and, especially, between writers and their own writing. When students and teachers can share the means of idea production, class discussion and writing become better connected, and students can more easily learn to see that good ideas don't just happen—they're made.

New to This Edition

- The biggest change in this edition is a new chapter called “Thinking Like a Writer” (Chapter 5). The chapter’s aim is to help writers become more confident about and more engaged with their own writing. After a brief review of the heuristics in the book’s first four chapters, the chapter offers a variety of writing prompts including description-based observation exercises, ways of keeping a Writer’s Notebook, and experiments with personal writing as a means of learning to use writing as a mode of inquiry. The emphasis throughout the chapter is on making the writing classroom a collaborative space. Toward that end, the chapter suggests alternatives to the usual ways of prompting revision and of working in groups with other writers.
- We have located the book’s chapters in three units in order to better distinguish different phases of the writing process and different levels of concern. Unit One contains the book’s primary observation heuristics along with definition of the aims and methods of analysis. Unit Two addresses issues relevant to writing analytical papers such as finding and developing a thesis, finding and evaluating sources, and putting sources into conversation in research-based writing. Unit Three explains forms and formats across the curriculum, basic writing errors and how to fix them, and ways of becoming more adept at seeing sentence shapes and understanding the impact of various style choices.
- We have relocated the “Interpretation” chapter (now Chapter 3) so that it comes immediately after and is better connected with the book’s opening two chapters, “The Five Analytical Moves” and “Reading Analytically.”
- We have rearranged the thesis chapter to better foreground its primary heuristic—the six steps for making a thesis evolve.
- We have extensively rewritten the chapter on research-based writing (“Conversing with Sources”), adding new and more accessible examples of effective student writing about sources.
- The chapter on finding, evaluating, and citing sources (including online sources) has been revised and updated by its author, a reference librarian.

- The table of contents more clearly flags each chapter's heuristics, "Try This" exercises, and "Voices from Across the Curriculum."
- There is now a two-page chart of many of the book's heuristics located inside the back cover.
- We have done what we could to correct infelicities of style and to make the book's explanations more concise—while still respecting students' need for rationale in support of our advice on how to become smarter, more observant, and more independent thinkers and writers.

How to Use This Book

For a quick introduction to the ideas and activities that the book offers, read the "Overview" paragraphs at the beginning of each chapter.

For a compact guide to the book's heuristics, see the two-page chart inside the back cover. Writing Analytically is activity-based; it offers a variety of ways to make writing happen in the classroom and to help students function collaboratively as learning communities.

To sample the kind of writing-to-learn assignments the book suggests, browse the "Try This" exercises dispersed throughout the book's chapters. These can be used to generate class discussion and as prompts for short writing assignments to be done in class or as homework.

There is also an extensive Instructor's Manual for Writing Analytically that is available to teachers of the book. It contains a wealth of materials on writing pedagogy as well as detailed discussions of how to work with each chapter in the book. If you are teaching the book, contact your Cengage representative to get access to a copy.

Although we assume that users of this book will most often wish to provide their own writing assignments and readings, we have provided writing assignments at the end of each chapter that can be adapted to various kinds of course content and various levels of student readiness for college writing. (Writing Analytically with Readings, 3rd edition, contains a series of analytical readings arranged into five thematic units.)

The following features of Writing Analytically should eliminate, in most cases, the need for an additional handbook:

- A concise but thorough guide to finding, evaluating, and citing sources—both print and digital (Chapter 9)
- A chapter with exercises, a punctuation guide, and a compact glossary of grammatical terms that teaches students how to recognize, understand, and correct nine basic writing errors (Chapter 12)
- A chapter on syntax and word choice that teaches students how to discern different sentence shapes and understand them not in terms of a single one-size-fits-all set of rules but as a range of options with different rhetorical effects (Chapter 11)

- A chapter on conversing with sources in research-based writing (Chapter 8)
- Extended discussion of various organizational schemes and discipline-specific formats across the curriculum (Chapters 6, 7, and 10).

Using Unit One: The Analytical Frame of Mind

Spend as much time as you can afford to spend on Chapter 1 (“The Five Analytical Moves”) and Chapter 2 (“Reading Analytically”), giving students the necessary practice to make these chapters’ observation heuristics habitual before moving on to the more paper-oriented focus of Unit Two. The rest of the book rests on the assumption that students have learned to apply these heuristics informally to everything they are asked to read and think about.

The primary goal of the heuristics is to habituate students to being more observant, less quick to move to judgments, and more able to move from observations to implications—which is not the same thing as selecting pieces of evidence solely for the purpose of supporting some single claim. These goals require hands-on practice. Students are asked to recognize that observation is not natural, but learned.

When students are first learning to do THE METHOD (looking for patterns of repetition and contrast), we often ask them to produce the lists and the single analytical paragraph that the exercise calls for as a regular homework assignment. In this way, they get repeated, low-stakes practice in thinking and writing analytically before being asked to present the results of their thinking in a more formal, thesis-driven or disciplinary format-driven mode.

For those instructors who need to assign papers from an early point in the semester, the writing prompts that are part of the heuristics called THE METHOD and NOTICE & FOCUS in Chapter 1 can easily generate a series of short papers.

The heuristics in Chapter 2, form a sequence that students can use with reading that they are asked to prepare for class: Commonplace Book, POINTING, PARAPHRASE × 3, PASSAGE-BASED FOCUSED FREEWRITING, FINDING THE PITCH AND THE COMPLAINT, UNCOVERING ASSUMPTIONS, REFORMULATING BINARIES.

As these practices become habitual, students become increasingly comfortable doing the work for themselves, rather than expecting teachers to explain the readings and other course materials for them. The chapter’s heuristics, like others in the book, help students learn to find their own starting points for writing and discussion, which we think is an important skill for them to learn as part of learning to write.

Chapter 3, “Interpretation,” follows from and further develops the move from observation to implication stressed in Chapters 1 and 2. The chapter answers two questions: What makes some interpretations better than others? and What makes interpretation more than a matter of opinion? The chapter’s primary concept is that interpretation always takes place within some context that a conscientious writer takes care to specify along with his or her reasons for choosing it.

Chapter 4, “Responding to Traditional Writing Assignments More Analytically,” shows students how to achieve greater analytical depth on traditional kinds of college writing topics, such as summary, comparison/contrast, and personal response. See, for example, the heuristic we call DIFFERENCE WITHIN SIMILARITY for sharpening the focus of comparing and contrasting.

Chapter 5, “Thinking Like a Writer” (new to this edition) offers a variety of writing assignments and exercises designed to encourage students to use the writing process as a source of ideas and personal growth. The chapter contains projects, such as keeping a Writer’s Notebook (not the same thing as a diary or a journal) and doing descriptive (observational) freewriting. The assignment at the end of this chapter, “Writing a Literacy Narrative,” is one that many writing courses start with. This chapter also contains rubrics for students’ self-evaluation and offers two formats for conducting small group peer review that rely on description rather than critique.

Using Unit Two: Writing the Analytical Paper

Early in a writing course, while students are learning to use the heuristics in Unit One, you might have students read about and try in Chapter 6 (“Reasoning from Evidence to Claims”) the practice we call 10 on 1 (saying 10 things about a single, representative example) as an alternative to 1 on 10—attaching the same, usually overly general claim to a series of examples. The chapter offers alternatives to rigidly deductive formats (such as five-paragraph form) that inhibit analyzing evidence in depth. The chapter explains the problem with mustering evidence only in order to prove that “I am right.”

Chapter 7, “Finding and Developing a Thesis,” confronts the idea that a thesis is an unchanging (static) claim and shows students how to use complicating evidence to make a thesis evolve. The chapter emphasizes the importance of qualifying claims. This orientation toward thesis-driven writing is challenging for students, and so we usually delay teaching it until students have learned in Unit One how to use writing in order to arrive at ideas. A good way to ease students into the methods prescribed in this chapter (under “Six Ways of Making a Thesis Evolve”) is to have them track the evolution of a thesis in things they are reading.

Chapter 8, “Conversing with Sources,” offers alternatives to agreeing or disagreeing with sources and to plugging them in as answers. It shows students how to do more than simply assemble sources in support of (or against) some point of view. A good place to start is to ask them to choose a single sentence from source A and a single sentence from source B and use these to determine what each author would say to the point of view implicit in the other’s statement.

Chapter 9, “Finding, Evaluating and Citing Sources,” was written by a college reference librarian, Kelly Cannon. It takes students on a tour of the research process, introducing them to useful indexes and bibliographies, showing them how to evaluate the relative value of both print and online sources, and explaining the logic of standard citation methods. Students can use this chapter just as they would use a handbook in order to cite sources according to the most recent citation guidelines in MLA, AP, Chicago, and CSE Styles. The chapter aims to make sense of the increasingly complex world of information in which students find themselves.

Using Unit Three: Matters of Form

Chapter 10, “From Paragraphs to Papers: Forms and Formats Across the Curriculum,” helps students see both the logic and the heuristic value of disciplinary formats such as IMRAD (the report format required in the natural and social sciences). The chapter emphasizes common denominators among the methods of organization prescribed in disciplines across the curriculum. The chapter also offers practical help with introductions, conclusions, and paragraph development.

Chapter 11, “Style: Choosing Words, Shaping Sentences,” teaches students how to look at sentences as the shapes that thought takes. The chapter gives students the vocabulary they need in order to analyze sentences and begin to think about what makes a sentence good. Rather than prescribing one set of style rules, the chapter shows students how to think in terms of the effects of various stylistic choices. The chapter explains, for example, that whatever comes at the end of a sentence tends to get the most emphasis, which offers a useful revision guideline.

Chapter 12, “Nine Basic Writing Errors (BWEs) and How to Fix Them,” offers students a self-help guide to finding and correcting errors in grammar and punctuation. The chapter offers proofreading advice based on Mina Shaughnessy’s concepts of hierarchy of error, pattern of error, and logic of error.

About the Authors

David Rosenwasser and Jill Stephen are professors of English at Muhlenberg College in Allentown, Pennsylvania. They teach writing, rhetoric, and literature and have co-directed Muhlenberg’s Writing Across the Curriculum (WAC) Program and Writing Center for many years. David started teaching as a graduate student at the University of Virginia and then at the College of William and Mary. Jill started teaching as a graduate student at New York University and then at Hunter College (CUNY). They have offered seminars on writing and writing instruction to faculty and graduate students across the country, and they regularly teach a semester-long training course to undergraduates preparing to serve as peer tutors in their college’s Writing Center and as Writing Assistants embedded in first-year seminars.

Acknowledgments

We owe much to the conversations about writing we have had over the years with colleagues and to their ongoing support of us and our book. Without

Christine Farris's early support, we might not have gotten through the long process of turning our ideas into a book. Without Christine's adoption of the book for the first-year writing program she directed at Indiana University, Writing Analytically might not have lasted beyond its first edition. Thanks also to John Schilb and Ted Leahey at Indiana and to the teachers across the state of Indiana who use our book for the dual credit writing course they offer in high schools.

Colleagues in the Writing Program at The Ohio State University offered us many learning opportunities during the years our book has served the university's first-year writing course. Thanks especially to Scott DeWitt, Wendy Hesford, and Eddie and Lynn Singleton, whom we count as both colleagues and friends.

In recent years, we have benefitted from and greatly enjoyed our collaborations with Noreen Groover Lape and Sarah Kersh at Dickinson College, where Noreen is Director of the Writing Program and Writing Center, and with Janet Carl, Director of the Writing Lab at Grinnell College, and her colleague in the English Department, Tim Arner. They are inspired and inspiring program directors and teachers.

We thank the faculty members at Dickinson, Grinnell, Kenyon (especially Jeanne Griggs, who brought us there to present to the Center for Innovative Pedagogy), Ramapo (with special thanks to Todd Barnes for inviting us to speak at the college), Indiana University, Ohio State, and at our own college, Muhlenberg, who have participated in our writing workshops over the years. They asked the questions we needed to hear.

We appreciate Jill Gladstein, who directs the Writing Associates Program at Swarthmore College, for her friendship and support and for her invention and nurturing of the Small Liberal Arts College-Writing Program Administrators consortium (SLAC), where we have had the opportunity to learn from colleagues who direct writing programs at small liberal arts colleges across the country.

We owe special thanks to present and past members of the Writing Program Committee at Muhlenberg College, including Chris Borick, Keri Colabroy, Ted Conner, Jessica Cooperman, Amy Corbin, Will Gyrc, Brian Mello, Pearl Rosenberg, Jordanna Sprayberry, and Lynda Yankaskas. Thanks as well to Provost Kathleen Haring for her continued support of the Writing Program, and to Dean Bruce Anderson for his generous support of travel grants for our tutors.

The cross-curricular dimension of this book would be sadly impoverished without the interest and support of our faculty colleagues who participate in the writing cohort at our college, many of whom are included in the Voices from Across the Curriculum boxes in the book. These colleagues (along with those on the Writing Program Committee) have shared with us examples of good student and professional writing in their fields, writing assignments from their writing-intensive classes, examples of their own writing, and responses to our question on what constitutes an analytical question. These colleagues include James Bloom, Susan Clemens-Bruder, Karen Dearborn, Daniel Doviak, Laura Edelman, Joseph Elliott, Chuck French, Jack Gambino, Barri Gold, William Gruen, Kimberley Heiman, Daniel Leisawitz, Dawn Lonsinger, John Malsberger, Eileen McEwan, Linda McGuire, Holmes Miller, Matt Moore, Marcia Morgan, Richard Niesenbaum, Dustin Nash, Jim Peck, Jefferson Pooley, Tad Robinson, Danielle Sanchez, Grant Scott, Beth Schachter, Jeremy Teissere, Alan Tjeltveit, Kevin Tuttle, and Bruce Wightman. We are also grateful to Katherine Kibblinger Gottschalk of Cornell University for permission to quote her paper on the correspondence of E. B. White.

For significant contributions to our book we offer much thanks to Kelly Cannon, reference librarian at Muhlenberg, for his chapter on finding, evaluating, and citing sources; to Keri Colabroy, for her contributions on writing in the natural sciences to our chapter on forms and formats across the curriculum, and for her amazing distillation of our book's heuristics into a two-page chart; to Chris Borick, for helping us clarify our thinking on thesis evolution in deductive writing and for writing an entertaining and informative guide to political labels for our essay anthology, Writing Analytically with Readings; to Sarah Kersh, for her writing and drawing, for her excellent work on the Instructor's Manual for Writing Analytically, and for her research on analytical essays for Writing Analytically with Readings (along with Robert Saenz di Viteri); and to the many faculty colleagues who have contributed their thinking on writing for the Voices Across the Curriculum pieces in the book.

We are grateful to our students, especially those who serve as peer tutors in Muhlenberg's Writing Center and in first-year seminars and upper-level writing courses at the college. We appreciate their enthusiasm, their integrity, and their dedication to writers and writing, and we admire the excellent research a number of them have done and presented at the International Writing Center Association's annual conferences. Special thanks go to students and former students who have recently contributed their writing to our book: Emily Casey, Kate O'Donoghue, James Patefield, Patrick C. Smith, Steven Poirier, Anna Whiston.

We benefitted much from the guidance of many people at Cengage. For this edition, we wish to thank Laura Ross, Leslie Taggart, Alison Duncan, Lynn Huddon, Aimee Bear, Mary Stone, and especially Elinor Gregory. Thanks as well to past editors who contributed much to previous editions: Karl Yambert, Dickson Musslewhite, Margaret Leslie, Michael Rosenberg, Aron Keesbury, John Meyers, Michell Phifer, and Karen R. Smith.

We cannot forget our longtime friends and inspiring colleagues from whom we have learned so much: Richard Louth, Dean Ward, Kenny Marotta, and Emily Stockton-Brown.

Over the past seven years, we could not have managed without the intelligence, resourcefulness, tact, and good humor of Brian Borosky, who served as Writing Assistant in each of our first-year seminars while he was an undergraduate, and who served for three years after graduation as Assistant Director of the Writing Center, in which role he essentially co-directed the Muhlenberg writing program with us—mentoring and managing our staff of fifty peer tutors, directing student research, soliciting and directing the review process for first-year seminars, assigning tutors to faculty members, arranging students' participation at national conferences, and more. We wish him all the best in graduate school and in wherever that and his many talents lead him.

We wish to dedicate this edition of the book to the memory of our friend and colleague, Linda Bips, who, as Professor of Psychology and Writing Program Liaison for Student Development, tirelessly supported us and our tutors, helping them to shape their research on tutoring practices and keeping them calm in the face of the inevitable pressures of working closely with faculty and students on writing. Linda always knew the right thing to say. We will never forget her mantra for working collaboratively with others: silence is the sound of people thinking.

Special thanks to our families: Elizabeth Rosenwasser, and Lesley and Sarah Stephen.

We would also like to thank the colleagues who reviewed the book; we are grateful for their insights:

Jared Abraham, Weatherford College

Diann Ainsworth, Weatherford College

Todd Barnes, Ramapo College of New Jersey

Darla Branda, Stephens College

Lisa Johnson, Casper College

Gary Leising, Utica College

Steven Plunkett, Brandeis University

Erika Sutherland, Muhlenberg College

Geoffrey Trumbo, Louisiana State University

Afton Wilky, Louisiana State University

Online Resources

MindTap® English for Rosenwasser/Stephen, Writing Analytically, 8th Edition, is the digital learning solution that powers students from memorization to mastery. It gives you complete control of your course—to provide engaging content, and to challenge every individual and build his or her confidence. Empower students to accelerate their progress with MindTap. MindTap: Powered by You.

MindTap gives you complete ownership of your content and learning experience. Customize the interactive assignments, emphasize the most important topics, and add your own material or notes in the eBook.

- Interactive activities on grammar and mechanics promote application to student writing.
- An easy-to-use paper management system helps prevent plagiarism and allows for electronic submission, grading, and peer review.

- A vast database of scholarly sources with video tutorials and examples supports every step of the research process.
- A collection of vetted, curated student writing samples in various modes and documentation styles to use as flexible instructional tools.
- Professional tutoring guides students from rough drafts to polished writing.
- Visual analytics track student progress and engagement.
- Seamless integration into your campus learning management system keeps all your course materials in one place.
- Additional thematic readings with questions for analysis.
- Downloadable worksheets for in-class activities or homework.

MindTap® English comes equipped with the diagnostic-guided JUST IN TIME PLUS learning module for foundational concepts and embedded course support. The module features scaffolded video tutorials, instructional text content, and auto-graded activities designed to address each student's specific needs for practice and support to succeed in college-level composition courses.

The Resources for Teaching folder provides support materials to facilitate an efficient course setup process focused around your instructional goals: the MindTap Planning Guide offers an inventory of MindTap activities correlated to common planning objectives, so that you can quickly determine what you need. The MindTap Syllabus offers an example of how these activities could be incorporated into a 16-week course schedule. The Instructor's Manual provides suggestions for additional activities and assignments.