Chapter 01

13. Fraud has a direct dollar-for-dollar impact on a company's:
- revenues.
 - net income.
 - profit margin.
 - stock price.

ANSWER:

b

RATIONALE:

- Incorrect. Fraud does not have a dollar-for-dollar impact on revenues. It takes significantly more revenues to cover the effect of the fraud on net income. Because revenues don't include the business costs, and the fraud directly hits the bottom line, ultimately, the fraud is much more expensive than it sounds.
- Correct. Losses incurred from fraud reduce a firm's income on a dollar-for-dollar basis. This means that for every $1 of fraud, the net income of the firm is reduced by $1.
- Incorrect. The profit margin is a percentage. It really tells the company how much revenue the company must generate to recover the fraud losses. For example, if the company has a 10% profit margin, and the fraud cost \$436 million, the company would have to generate \$4.36 billion or $(436 \text{ million} / .1)$ to recover the costs of the fraud.
- Incorrect. The stock price literally cannot drop by the amount of the fraud. If price per share was $5 and the fraud was $100,000, then stock price could not drop below $0. However, if the fraud is $100,000, the price per share multiplied by the number of shares outstanding will probably drop considerably more than $100,000.
